

Hi there! My name is Mick Cagney and this is a bit about me.

I have worked in the hospitality industry all my life. The roles I have performed vary wildly! In security roles I have been the doorman, undercover security officer and communications dispatch. In Back-of-House I was dishwasher and equipment / building maintenance in various different restaurant operations. I also ran stock rooms, staff schedules, hiring (and firing) of employees as Back-of-House manager. In Front-of-House I hosted, ran food, waited tables, tended bar and again, managed.

I have managed many different types of operations, a not-for-profit scuba co-operative, several restaurants and a for-profit outdoor sports center. Most recently I managed the bar and IT operations for a large Southern California HOA.

In my spare time I enjoy listening to music, especially live, sailing and technical scuba. I am a big fan of almost all professional sports from baseball to cycling to rugby. I embraced change as the hospitality arena becomes increasingly technical. Not just P.O.S. computer systems but lighting, sound systems, public facing websites and inward facing scheduling systems are all being computerized. I went to San Diego Community College to study tech support going on to parlay that time into an IT position in addition to my hospitality duties.

After all the years I still thrive on the challenges of working in a 'live' environment. My breadth of experience enables me to fully understand and solve the daily problems thrown at me, without missing a step.

My resume has variously listed addresses in Dublin Ireland, New Jersey, New York, San Diego and now Sligo, Ireland!
